Endfields Couple Slain; Police Suspect Homicide

Police officer Smith makes sure the scene of the crime is protected from vandalism.

The Endfields were horribly slain in their own home. Despite evidence the police suspect that it is a Homicide. A neighbor discovered their bodies after knocking on the door to borrow some eggs. The neighbor noticed their car was in the driveway and looked in through the window. The neighbor then called the police. "They were always nice people", the neighbor said after the police had arrived on the scene.

Police say they are using all their resources to solve the Endfields death. Just today they made an announcement to the press saying that they suspect that it was a murder. If the bodies have been stabbed repeatedly wouldn't that be murder? Why do the police only suspect and are not positive that it was murder? Our police officers need to be more committed and sure of themselves.

"To protect and maybe serve?"
